The True Geometry-in-Motion of Earth and her Axis

By Stefan Sattler

Think of Earth’ motion in the following way.

1.) Earth' basic motion tidally locked and CCW (counterclockwise) around the Sun, like the motion of the Moon around Earth (one side always facing Earth, so-called phase-locked or tidally locked to the Earth)

2.) Add to it a 24-hour rotation CCW and

3.) A daily Axis Angle Direction Forward Ticking Clockwise (CW), a little less than 1° per day.

Imagine she is doing her rotation around the Sun like the Moon rotates around the Earth with always the same side facing the Earth. Add the motion that you think of as Earth’ Wobble; like what you think is causing the Precession of the Equinox; clockwise, to the right. Add the daily rotation around herself counterclockwise. The first two motions are seemingly annihilating each other so that it seems that Earth’ Axis is always fixed and pointing into the same direction in the greater/outer space.

Earth is orbiting the sun and imagine the axis is tilted at approximately 23,4° to the sun while the axis is always pointing to the sun, the center of that motion pattern. Obviously, it is not doing this, because if it did so, there would be summer all year on the north side of the earth. Now ask yourself: What force is pushing the axis (tilting-angle-direction) per quarter year an additional 90° to the right, meaning clockwise, so that it is as can be observed in reality?

As I explained there are two different kinds of motion responsible for it. These two movements are seemingly annihilating each other. That's why we obviously never really thought about it. We just never recognized that we don't have a sufficient explanation for our own Earth' (Axis') movement, because it seems to be fixed! That motion is what I've called the Syrian Dance (Sirian Dance?). It's the kind of motion we think of when we describe the so-called Wobble of the Earth which we think is what leads to the so-called Precession of the Equinox.

So then, what actually makes the Precession of the Equinox? Well, it's the same phenomenon and mechanics: The Sun and the whole Solar-System is phase-locked/tidally locked to its Greater Star which our Sun is revolving around! Whether that is Alcyone, which some say is Tara and not Alcyone at all, or any other star doesn't matter for right now for we first have to understand the basic mechanical principle and then we can apply this to the actual stars further out. We know Earth is doing a revolution around the sun and the rotation around its own axis, ok. But what we didn't understand is why the Earth Axis and her 'tilting-angle-direction' is seemingly fixed to a certain direction in space.

So, what actually is the so-called Sidereal Day then? There seems to be a misunderstanding. One full rotation of Earth around herself on her own axis is not 23 56 hours as currently claimed by official science! That would be the so-called misunderstood Sidereal Day, which is not a full rotation. Sidereal Day just means the same relative position of the stars at 23 56 o' clock as in the night at midnight the day before; but that doesn't mean a full rotation is 23 hours and 56 minutes long. Not a real full rotation around Earth' own axis.

It just means that after 23 56 hours the night sky is in the relatively same position as in the night at midnight before. And that's because these nearly 4 minutes early are equalizing the wandering and the changing of the relative position of Earth towards the stars and planets throughout one day on her way around the sun. You see, Earth is wandering approx. 1/365 of her full path around the sun every day including the 'curving'. By curving I mean the tiny little movement which is necessary to adjust (and rotate inward) so that always the same side would face the sun. Like the moon is doing, which I explained above, so that the way you see the stars at 23 56 o'clock is in the same relative position and direction as at midnight the day before. And at midnight, it has slightly changed. Like the clock ticking further one step every day.

Meaning the real, actual own rotational period of Earth is 24 hours! The mark at 23 56 o'clock would be more precisely called the Sidereal Point. And it surely has the same duration. 24 hours from one sidereal point to the next and not 23 hours plus 56 minutes, that is a false assumption. Full rotation is 24 hours and being 24 hours, the official explanation doesn't add up, like I explained, because sunrise would be every day 4 minutes later! Extrapolate that to one full wandering of sunrise around the 'clock' in one year and it becomes obvious: Sunrise is not 4 minutes later every day but going forth and back throughout summer and winter. If it really were as suggested, the sunrise would not be like earlier in summer and later in winter, in relation to the northern hemisphere, opposite for the southern one, but the sunrise would kind of 'travel around the day' throughout one year. Meaning you would have sunrise at 6 h, three months later at 12 h, three months later at 18 h and three months later at 24 h, and three months later at 6 h again. Obviously, that's not the case but instead the sunrise goes back and forth.

Further Speculations on Pole Shifts, Retrograde Running Planets & Rotating Moons

So, now we are able to explain what so-called Pole Switches and Pole Flips have been in the past, and what not. It's not that the field suddenly changes polarity while Earth, the material globe itself, is staying and moving in the same way, but it's about the axis again. When the tilting gets bigger and bigger and the angle is increasing more and more to become nearly 0°, not straight up but down, like the North Pole is pointing more and more to the Sun while Earth is rotating around the Sun, there will be a moment when it flips over and the Geographical North Pole, meaning the actual physical tip of the spinning sphere, goes over the Equatorial Line of the Solar System, turning the sphere up-side-down. Probably accompanied by a lot of catastrophes and cataclysms. Now, the field and the direction of the flow of energy from the sun and of the Solar System as a whole will stay the same as before but because the Earth is now upside down, the flow will be received and imprinted in the opposite direction.

So, the field has not changed but the – physical - Earth has flipped over and thus we find these different directions of magnetic flow indicated in different geological sediments. That is what has happened to Venus (and other planets), that's why Venus is running retrograde. Meaning its rotational direction is against its revolutionary direction around the sun. Venus is spinning clockwise, while she is going around the sun counterclockwise.

Understanding this will bring us to the next possible option of understanding that it might be possible to start to rotate the moon, and bring new life to our sister planet by creating a Electro-Magneto-Gravitational field on the moon, which then will bring in the plasma and gravity, et voilà, we will be able to create water, energy, atmosphere, etc. which itself will strengthen the field and the atmosphere even more so that the interference and resonance between the Earth and the Moon grows stronger until the point where we will have resonance, meaning communication of forces. Even easier is it when all this happens while the Earth Axis is already straightening up, because then all three movements, the rotation and the revolution of Earth plus the revolution of the Moon around Earth, will happen in one vibratory Oscillation Plane which heavily increases the chances of interference and thus interaction. It's a kind of an overtone, which is created in harmony with the Base Tones of each movement of its own. If we learn to do this, there will be plenty of other planets and moons waiting for us. Ceres, Europa, planetary bodies in the Kuiper-belt and what not; yes indeed, an endless story.

What I'm further suggesting is that the light of the stars, no matter how far away, is not light which is coming out of the past! Because our current science is pretending that light is only able to travel at the speed of light, which might maybe be correct on Earth or in Earth' atmosphere in a vacuum but not in space. Light is not travelling as light, as an electromagnetic wave, through space. It – the momentum, charge and energy of what we call light - is riding on, or better is tunneled through, the Preplasmatic Scalar Wave Field through space. Space is not empty as we have believed for a long time. And like Earth itself Space, too, it is not dead, primitive and unconscious. It is a huge Scalar Wave Field through which an infinite number of overtones and undertones are moving in almost Real-Time. The scalar wave tunnels the light - the impulse, momentum, charge, information and force of that light, through itself, whereas this light gets tunneled nearly infinite times, which is giving it this incredible near Real-Time speed. Only after this light-impulse is touching Earth and Earth' atmosphere it will become and behave and move in the way of what we think light (the so-called electromagnetic wave) is and does.

Conclusions

Now, let me end with this. The reason why I am sharing this discovery of The True Motion of Earth and her Axis for the last ten years with the world and why I am so vehemently insisting on the importance to publicly share and disclose this fundamental physical-cosmological truth with and to mankind is because there is the very realistic and probable possibility that the angle of the tilting of Earth' Axis is changing right now. Meaning there might be natural factors causing the Axis to start straightening up towards the healthy upright 90° position, which – as you can imagine – would come along with a lot of monumental changes for Earth' energetic template, environment, climate, weather, biology and much more. If any signs of a process like that might start to show up, this will pose a tremendous civilizational challenge for mankind. By now everybody should have understood that all nature's DNA is heavily influenced by this energetic field of Earth. So, if this field is squeezed, which it is, our DNA is squeezed as well. That's the actual reason why I invested ten precious years of mine into sharing that cosmological truth. You know*, a man gotta do what a man gotta do!*
